JUDGE JOHN S. RHEA SUE BY LAWYER FOR HERNDONS

Suit Over Alleged Refusal To Hear Attorney's Cases Is Political Feud Echo

Greenville, Ky., April 18.—As a sequel to the Rhea-Herndon political feud in Logan County, Hubert Meredith, Greenville attorney, today filed suit against Circuit Judge John S. Rhea for $10,000 damages for alleged refusal to hear his cases. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court here, which is in Judge Rhea's district.

Mr. Meredith charges that this "arbitrary action" of Judge Rhea "was an unlawful abridgment" of his license to practice law. He says no charges have been made against his character. Appointment of special judges in all of his cases is impractical, the attorney contends.

Mr. Meredith represented Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Herndon, Russellville newspaper publishers, in the sensational court proceedings growing out of political enmity between the Rhea and anti-Rhea factions.

The Herndons were indicted for criminal libel in connection with an editorial attacking Judge Rhea. The indictment was quashed by a special judge after the Herndons charged Judge Rhea had influenced the grand jury.

Judge Rhea later was arrested on the charge of having written an obscene letter to Mrs. Herndon but he was dismissed at the preliminary hearing before the United States Commissioner.

A number of other matters of business were attended to and a pleasing musical program under the direction of Miss Margaret Nall was rendered. Miss Alma Simpson's room won the box of candy offered as an attendance prize.

POPULAR CENTRAL CITY FIRM BUYS OUT COMPETITOR

Rubenstein Brothers, enterprising business men, who have operated a large store in Central City for the past eleven years, have recently purchased the business of H. Miller & Co., on Broad street of that city and will in the future conduct two stores. They will carry one of the largest and most complete stocks of dry goods, clothing, shoes, floor coverings and in fact everything in this line, of any store in Western Kentucky.

Their old stand has been advertised far and wide as "The Poor Man's Friend" and from their past success we are of the opinion that they have made good their motto.

ENJOYABLE SOCIAL

The Hartford Methodist Church gave a most enjoyable social in the basement of the church building on Friday evening. An interesting program was rendered including talks by the pastor, Rev. T. T. Frazier, Miss Elizabeth Moore and Mr. Wilbur Rhoads, of Central City, readings by Mrs. Frazier and Miss Winnie Simmerman, instrumental music by Miss Anna Rhea Carson and Mr. W. J. Bean and a vocal quartette by Messrs. W. J. and John Bean, G. J. Christian and E. S. Howard. The guests were also favored with a number of phonographic selections by Mrs. Jennie S. Miller. After the program old and young, giddy and dignified "unbent" and enjoyed themselves with games, contests and various other "stunts." "Parson" Frazier sure is a live wire in entertaining as well as in everything else he undertakes.

ANOTHER FALLEN HERO RETURNED FROM FRANCE

Seventeen Uniformed Ex-Service Men Assist At Burial Of Robert Davis

The body of Robert Artamos Davis arrived here from France Saturday and was taken to the home of his mother, Mrs. Ella Davis near Hartford, where it remained until Sunday afternoon, when funeral services were conducted at Mt. Herman.

Robert entered the army after the United States became involved in the war and went overseas with the U. S. Inf., 30th Div. He was killed by shell fire late in the evening of Oct. 8, 1918, at Premont, France, and was buried at Brancourt De Grand Aisne, from which place he was later removed to Bond cemetery.

He was 27 years, 1 month and 17 days old, having been born Aug. 21, 1891. He professed religion at No Creek several years ago and joined Hartford Methodist church, but later moved his membership to No Creek. Those who knew him well say he was a good, straightforward, industrious boy and had every prospect for a bright future. He leaves besides his mother, one brother, Rupert, and one sister, Mrs. Amy Lane.

The funeral service was conducted in an impressive manner by Rev. T. T. Frazier, assisted by Rev. Herrald. Burial occurred in the cemetery near the Mt. Herman church. Seventeen uniformed soldiers were present. One of these acted as bugler, six as pall bearers and the remainder as an escort. A large congregation was present regardless of the cold and inclement weather.

The mother desires to extend her sincerest thanks to the many friends who assisted at the home, at the funeral and at the burial and for the many words of sympathy expressed.

During his stay here Prof. Bruner succeeded in placing the Smith-Hughes vocational work on a firm basis. He and Mrs. Bruner have won many friends here and we regret that it becomes necessary to give them up. They will go to Auburn about June 15.

MERCHANTS-MANUFACTURERS TO HOLD EXPOSITION

Interest in Big Owensboro Event Spreading to Adjoining Counties

Interest in the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Exposition to be held in Owensboro, Apr. 21, 22 and 23 is extending into counties adjacent to Owensboro. As it has become known that the show is to be an automobile show, an industrial exposition, a farm exhibition and a sort of carnival all in one, the appeal to the people of a wide territory has grown and evidences of a large attendance from Ohio, McLean Hancock and Muhlenberg counties is said to be in prospect.

Exhibits of approximately 100 manufacturers, auto dealers, and merchants will be gathered under one roof. Some of the displays will be novel and show the operations in the manufacture of some of the products for which Owensboro is known all over the country. Elaborate decorations are being used to transform the large Daviess County Loose Leaf Warehouse into an indoor carnival home. Decorations costing $1,000 are being used.

The large Evansville Municipal band will give concerts, morning, afternoon and night. In the words of the average society editor, "a good time will be had by all."

LOCAL CLEAN-UP PARADE PROVES GRAND SUCCESS

Many Appropriate Floats and Object Lessons; Much Interest Being Manifested

The program of Clean-Up Week was substantially carried out as outlined in our last issue, beginning with the Parade on Wednesday afternoon. There were about a dozen floats or separate exhibits followed by the students and teachers of the local Graded and High School. The line of march was led by Misses Amelia Pirtle and Bessie Clark on horseback. Music was furnished by Messrs. Frank and Cecil Tichenor, Archie Johnson and Roy Barnhill. Messrs. Parke Taylor and Edward Duke proved most efficient Marshals. Perhaps the most spectacular participants in the parade were Doug and his "White Mule," the "Old Dutch Cleanser" Girl and the "Gold Dust Twins." A touch of the beauty and freshness of childhood was lent by the pony equipages of Little Miss Irene Cox Birkhead and Masters Birkhead and Brown, (three of 'em.) The most elaborately decorated cars were driven by Miss Winnie Davis Simmerman and Mr. Tony Johnson, the former decorated in patriotic colors, the latter with foliage and blossoms.

The most formidable looking bunch was the shovel and pick squad piloting the county truck.

The best premeditated object lesson was the float, "Hartford As She Is," featuring Miss Beatrice Leach and Messrs. Everett Himes and Virgil Crowe, but the best practical demonstration of our municipal needs was the fact that the float carrying "The Queen of the Carnival" broke down right on Main street in front of the Court House.

The ceremonies on the public square at the close of the parade were appropriately and entertainingly carried out. The school children, under Mrs. S. O. Keown's direction, sang several rousing songs and short talks along the line of Civic improvement were made by Judge Mack Cook, Prof. Roy Foreman and Messrs. A. D. Kirk and James Tate, introduced by W. C. Blankenship. Quite a good sized crowd indicated their interest in the movement by their presence. The efforts of the Clean Up Committee and their aids were continued through the week, and it is reported that they met with hearty co-operation on all sides. The management of the movement want to take this opportunity to again thank all who so kindly helped with all phases of the work.

KENTUCKY GIRL TELLS OF ARMENIA

CONTRASTS SPLENDORS OF HAREM WITH MISERY OF STARVING CHRISTIANS.

Driven To Seek Refuge In Graveyards And To Use Rats For Food People Have Hope Only In Generosity of America.

Surrounded by pictures of starving women and children and also those of riches and luxury, Miss Constance Sheltman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Sheltman, Louisville, is living in the midst of the scene of the tragedy of Armenia.

Miss Sheltman is well known to Kentuckians. She was formerly connected with the Pine Mountain Settlement in Harlan County. During the period following the armistice she served as reconstruction aid in Germany, France and Belgium.

Miss Sheltman is supervisor of one of the industries established by the Near East Relief at Stamboul, near Constantinople. In letters to her parents and friends she tells the story of the Armenians, who are homeless and dying and awaiting crumbs which fall from America's hands. She also describes a visit to a Turkish harem, the magnificence of which formed a striking contrast to the suffering all about her, she said.

Writing of the general condition Miss Sheltman says the atmosphere of Constantinople is one of constant turmoil, strife and hatred.

"The Turks try to run over the Armenians and the Armenians try to run over the Turks," she said. "And all of them try to run over the Jews, who in turn retaliate."

Eats Dogs and Cats.

She says that the former verdant fields of the Armenians are without vegetation or life of any sort. There are no houses for the refugees, no crops, no living animals—which might be used as food. All the cats, dogs and horses have been killed and eaten, she writes. She tells of one instance when she saw a group of persons carefully guarding live rats, which were to be killed and used as food when hunger could not be satisfied otherwise.

Describing the homes of some Armenians who have ceased wandering back and forth from place to place, she says:

"I followed the old sea walls for several miles and saw persons living in ruins—in dugouts, even in graveyards, utilizing tombstones for part of their impoverished hovels. The filth and wretchedness were unspeakable. Even the beach was nothing but slime and tin cans and refuse of every kind, and the waves were black with the filth and debris that washed out with one wave and back with the next."

A visit to one of the places of the Sultan of Turkey affords a contrasting scene:

"Yesterday we went to the Seraglio, one of the Sultan's places, going through the different kiosks (summer houses), the library, the harem, etc. It was all beautiful. Such exquisite rich coloring, I have never seen before. We were ushered into a great reception room, where we sat around very stiff and formally, while the attendants passed cigarettes and Turkish coffee, served in gold cups, each of which was set with thirty large diamonds. Speaking of diamonds, though Constantinople is at present the most expensive place in the world to live, jewelry is one of the things one can get for a song. Much of it has been brought in by Russian refugees."

Where the Money Goes.

Miss Sheltman is superintending the buying of materials for a "fabrika," an industry which furnishes employment for several hundred Armenian women and girls. Near the "fabrika" are orphanages of the Near East Relief organization, where thousands of children are cared for. Enough food is given to them to keep the breath of life. It is here that the money collected in America goes after conversion into food and supplies.

Miss Sheltman says she has no personal fear for her safety, for American ships are anchored in the harbor of Constantinople, and the Turk, because of his respect for America's power, does not disturb American citizens or the Armenians in industries and orphanages operated by Americans. However, in the outlying districts, the people are unprotected and the massacre goes on, much the same as it has for years, she writes.

Writing of the work of the industries, Miss Sheltman tells with regret of the laying off of 100 workers, because of insufficient funds to provide work for them.

"Every day they return, begging and crying for work," she said. "It is distressing, but I realize that if we can just get our feet again it will mean so much to these people. My position here lays me open to continual demands for relief and at present (the middle of February) I have only $2 left of my salary to run me the rest of the month."

All America is sending relief to this stricken people, Miss Beth Higgins, State director, Louisville Trust Building, Louisville, appeals for financial assistance in the movement.

WHEN SKIRTS RUSTLED

Do you remember the era of fashion when the skirts rustled?

It was the day of silks and crinoline, and the lady who strode down the aisle of the church without the sand paper rhythm was never invited out to six o'clock dinners with a card party aftermath.

That was the day when skirts were to be heard, and a promenade down the street sounded like a tramp through a deep wood when the blanket of fallen leaves was at its driest crisp.

To day we do not hear the rustle. All is silent. The skirts of today are to be seen, not heard. It is a soothing transition, as we pass from ear to eye.

Likewise, since the skirts of today are to be seen they have been brought up close to the line of vision, and the girth has been narrowed until there is just an eye full.

But a short skirt has much to commend it. We can remember the time when they swept the pavement leaving in their wake a cloud of germ laden dust that was the signal of the passing.

Boards of Health discussed the long, sloven skirt and threatened to bring about legislation that would lift it to a harmless level.

But fashion interposed and did its own uplifting. It not only brought the skirt to a harmless level, but certain of the clergy think it slightly above the harmless.

Fashion had the good sense to know that milady's skirt could not be short and full at the same time. The tides and the winds are not under fashion's dictate, so to prevent an elevation above the line of discretion fashion said what the theater manager is glad to say: "Standing Room Only."

Therefore short and tight are twin essentials. Good to stand in, but sitting down is quite another matter.

But after all, we have become accustomed to the short skirt. There may not be enough of it to rustle, but there is an ease and a sense of agility that seems sensible.

Sometimes we fear that the tendency to make both ends meet is applying to the skirt as well as to our household economy, but there is a modesty as well as a destiny that shapes our ends; and in this lies our safety.

Here's something else again: Whether a skirt is too short depends much upon the wearer. If there is grace and modesty walking hand in hand with the abbreviation there's something else to divide our attention.

Do you remember the long vest that amounted almost to an apron? Do you remember the spring bottom trousers? Wasn't that a foolish innovation.

They would have been alright for the sailor boy. His open bottom trousers are made flaring that he may peel them over his foot wear quickly in case he has to take to the water hurriedly before the ship goes down.

Then there was the welt down the outer seam of the trouser legs. Just what it was for no investigating committee has ever disclosed. It belongs to the mystery of the shirt open in the back that you skinned over your head instead of the common sense present day coat shirt.

Fashion is a fickle, but a terribly imperative task master, and the most of us obey.

Horace Mann, the great educator, once said that he or she was best dressed whose dress attracts no notice.

If this rule was religiously applied we fear the present day feminine attire would go quickly into the discard. But Horace lived in a day when adornment was not considered much of a virtue.

FARM EXTRACTS

INFORMATION FROM THE EXPERIMENT STATION—AGRICULTURAL PAPERS AND THE COUNTY AGENT'S OFFICE

Farmers Should Not Plant Imported Soy Bean Seed

There is a sufficient supply of American-grown soy bean seed of proved varieties to plant a greatly increased acreage. The United States Department of Agriculture, therefore, feels warranted in recommending that farmers under no circumstances plant their fields to imported soy bean seed.

The attention of the department has been called to the presence on the market of imported soy bean seed for planting purposes. This is exceedingly undesirable as the varieties grown in oriental countries are very numerous, and the majority of the varieties are not nearly so productive as those commonly grown in the United States. The Department of Agriculture has tested over 1,000 introductions from various parts of the Orient, and the majority of these are much inferior to the best varieties grown in this country. Imported seed usually is a mixture of varieties, even if the seeds be apparently the same.

In the Orient the small grower sells his crop to the small town buyer, who in turn sells the seed collected from many growers to the merchant at the nearest railway point. All such seed is classed merely as yellow, black, green, or brown, no attention being given to the numerous varieties having similar seeds. It will be seen readily that the shipper at the seaport will have a considerable mixture of varieties in the different color groups. Quite recently from a small package of imported yellow beans, 18 different sorts were selected by seed characters.

Any farmer planting such seed is taking an unwarranted risk, and the chances are practically certain he will have the experience reported by a Massachusetts farmer who planted a 4-pound package of imported soy bean seed in 1920: "I found that there was almost every known variety of soy bean in that package. At harvesting some were dead ripe, others in all stages to those that were just setting pods. Some were low growing, and from this all the way up to those that would have climbed a 10-foot pole."

Kentucky Crop Report

Louisville, Ky., Apr. 11.—The condition of wheat and rye in all the principal farming sections of Kentucky is unusually good; there are 5 percent fewer brood sows in the State than there were this time last year; and although the labor supply is only 8 percent below normal the demand for farm labor is 13 percent below normal, according to the April crop and livestock report for Kentucky issued today by the United States Bureau of crop estimates in co-operation with State Commissioner of Agriculture W. C. Hanna. The condition of wheat in Kentucky April 1 is given as 95 percent of normal compared to 62 percent April 1, 1920, and an average condition of 84 percent April 1 during the last 10 years. Rye condition in this State is 95 this month compared to 74 percent April 1 last year and an average condition of 87 percent April 1 for the last 10 years.

The acreage of wheat sowed in Kentucky last fall was approximately the same as that sowed in 1919 (625,000 acres) but rye was 42,000 acres compared to 44,000 acres sowed in 1919. The mild weather of this winter and spring has been very favorable for small grains in all parts of the State except in some parts of the southeastern mountain counties.

Farm labor is 10 percent more plentiful than it was this time last year, but still only 92 percent of normal supply, as many farmers cannot afford to pay the wages demanded by laborers, and farmers report they have cut their demands for labor 17 percent below last year's demands and 13 percent below normal. This is due to the general slump in prices of farm products, particularly tobacco. Farmers say in their reports that unsatisfactory prices for farm products and the high prices persistently demanded for manufactured goods are tending to reduce farm production.

United States Reports for the United States as a whole indicate winter wheat condition is 91 percent of normal compared to 75.6 percent April 1, 1920 and an average of 83.6 percent April 1 for the last 10 years. This indicates a probable total production of about 621,000,000 bus. of winter wheat compared to 577,763,000 bus. last year, and 725,503,420 bus. in 1919. The United States rye crop now shows a condition of 90.5 percent compared to 86.8 percent April 1, 1920, and 88.4 percent average on April 1 for the last 10 years. This condition of rye forecasts a production of about 66,000,000 bus. this year compared to 69,318,000 bus. last year, 88,909,000 bus. in 1919, and an average of 59,933,000 bus. during the 5 years preceding 1919. Brood sows in the United States as a whole are 2.2 percent fewer than on April 1, 1919, while the labor supply is 4.8 percent less than normal and the farmers' demands for labor 12.5 percent less than normal.

MOTOR CAR RUNNING AT HIGH SPEED CRASHES INTO TENDER OF TRAIN

Covington, Ky., Apr. 16.—Four persons were killed, four seriously injured, and two others less badly hurt when an automobile truck struck a Chesapeake & Ohio railroad engine at the crossing of Pike and Russell streets, this city, early Wednesday.

The dead are: Dr. A. J. Heavern, dentist, of Newport, Ky.

Virginia Murray, Latonia, Ky. Charles Miles, Jr., Newport. Florence Kemper, Cincinnati.

The seriously injured are: Ruth Potter, Luella Schockman, Helen Ford, Leo Eisch, all of Cincinnati. Walter Creighton and Arthur Klein, of Newport, were the other occupants of the automobile, but they were only slightly injured.

Ten persons were in the machine that struck the tender of the engine. Miles was driving. The automobile was going at a high rate of speed when it reached the crossing. Miles, his view of the railroad track obstructed by a house on the corner of the crossing, did not see the engine and tender backing down the track, and the automobile struck the tender with terrific force. The force of the impact threw the tender from the track and demolished the automobile.

WATCHED ROBINS' NEST THEN POLICEMAN CAME

New York, April 16.—An elderly man in tattered cap and suit sat motionless under a tree at 257th and Broadway when a mounted patrolman, informed that a queer stranger had been sleeping there three days, approached.

"I'm interested in birds," the old man said, "particularly in the domestic affairs of the pair of robins above us, I have enjoyed their acquaintance three seasons."

He launched then into the story of a row that was being waged in the nest, the result, he said, of the laying there of a cuckoo's egg. "The male bird wanted to throw it out, but the female chirped 'no' and has hatched it. I am waiting to see what will happen next. Queer things, birds."

"Yes," said the patrolman, "and the folk hereabouts think you're somewhat of a queer bird, too." "How very extraordinary," replied he of the tattered clothing, "here's my card."

The patrolman read: "Professor Malcolm Ogilvie, New York Ornithological Society," and the policeman rode on.

The Waterloo Boy gives you service that pays most—the service you want. It does your work the way you want it done.

Its twin-cylinder engine gives you 12 H. P. at the drawbar, and 25 H. P. on the belt. It burns kerosene, and by means of a patented manifold converts every drop of this low-priced fuel into rugged, positive power.

A pump, fan and radiator cooling system holds the engine at the proper temperature for correct lubrication, and maintains enough heat to insure complete combustion. The radiator holds thirteen gallons. You don't have to stop in the field every few hours of a hot day and fill it. That's real service.

You have to see the Waterloo Boy to fully appreciate it. Come in and we will show you and tell you why the Waterloo Boy is the right tractor for your farm.

VALENTINOTRY

To the Readers of The Herald:

In November 1888 I purchased a half interest in the Hartford Herald, and in 1891 the other half was purchased. Being the sole owner of this plant, I gave my best efforts to the Herald, assisted by the late Mr.
Matthews, for nearly twenty-six years. The paper was incorporated in January 1917, I disposing of the greater part of the stock and surrendering the active management to other, and may I say, better hands.

With this issue of the Herald I reluctantly sever all connection with the dear old Herald, having disposed of my remaining stock to Mr.
McDowell A. Fogle, who together with Mr. Lyman G. Barrett, who also owns stock in the corporation, will be at the helm in the future.

These are both sterling young men, whom, I predict, will give their very best efforts in further building up the paper, which, I may say, is second to no other weekly paper in Kentucky, in point of equipment, thereby extending its usefulness.

Under its new management I bespeak for the Herald the hearty support they so well deserve.

In conclusion, I wish to thank the thousands, who so joyfully stood by me in my feeble efforts for more than a quarter of a century, for their support.

With good will towards all and ill feeling toward none and with my very best wishes for the new management, I am

Yours very truly,
F. L. FELIX.

While we are busy with our campaign for a City Beautiful, let us not forget that silent City of the Dead which is our neighbor to the northward. The natural advantages of Oakwood Cemetery are hardly surpassed in the State and with proper care and improvement it could be made second to none in beauty.
Each of us whose loved ones have their last earthly resting place there holds it as sacred ground. Let us not fail to see that God's Acre is at least as well taken care of as our own.

We don't in the least blame our Republican journalistic friends for wanting to emphasize the parts of the President's message which deal with domestic problems but to lightly and hurriedly skip over his wobbly remarks in regard to our foreign affairs. The latter indeed make painful reading for all honest Republicans. But the really distressing feature of the present national outlook is that no definite or lasting amelioration of conditions at home can be accomplished until our relations with Germany and our Allies are clearly settled.

In this issue of the Herald will be found an advertisement of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Exhibition to be held in Owensboro April 21-23. This demonstration of the progressiveness of Daviess County business men is being promoted in no spirit of competition with like enterprises in neighboring counties or cities, but is dictated by a desire to co-operate with their neighbors in efficient service to the public.

Ohio county merchants and manufacturers might profitably emulate
the example set.

FAIR & Co.
THE FAIR DEALERS

The Hartford Herald, $1.50 the Year.

$25,000 Stock of New and Up-to-Date Merchandise To Be Slaughtered At About

50 Cents On the Dollar!

The Big Sale Starts
Friday, April 22, at 8:00 a. m.

THIS SALE is the result of H. Miller quitting the mercantile business to engage in the picture show business.

In order to get out quickly, and to turn his stock into cash, he asked Rubenstein Bros., the enterprising merchants of Central City, to make him an offer on his stock and lease on the building. Now, you can imagine Rubenstein Bros. gave very little for it, in view of the fact that they had already bought their spring stock, and of course had all the goods they wanted. In fact, they had just had a big sale a short time ago, in order to reduce their own stock, and besides $25,000.00 cash is a lot of money. This they did not have, so they made Mr. Miller a very low price, with the understanding if accepted, he would give them time to put on a big sale, so as to realize on the stock, in order to pay him. The price was so low Mr. Miller rejected it, but finally he took it.

After closing the deal, Mr. Lawrence Rubenstein came to Louisville to see us, and requested us to take charge of the stock and put on a sale to raise this money. We agreed to do this; therefore the stock is in our hands, and we are going to sell it on the same basis it was bought, or about 50 cents on the dollar. Now, if you want bargains, make your plans to attend this sacrifice sale of high-class merchandise at 50 cents on the dollar. The stock consists of high-class Clothing, (men's and boys,) Ladies' Dresses, Cloaks and Ready-to-Wear, Hats, Caps, Shoes, Dry Goods, Notion, etc.

We shall mention only a few prices, as they won't mean anything to you. The thing to do, is to come and save half the price of your spring outfits. Don't forget the date, Friday, April 22, 8:00 a. m., H. Miller's stand. Ladies' 25c white hose, 5c the pair; Hoosier brown Cotton, 9½c; Hope bleached Cotton, 16½c; Men's Suits, $8.98 up; Ladies' Dresses, Suits and Spring Coats, $7.95 up; Ladies' and Men's Shoes and Slippers, 98c up; Children's Shoes, 48c up.

We will send up a big balloon Friday at 12:15 p. m., and one Saturday at 1:00 p. m. Both balloons will have a tag attached. The one returning these tags will be given a $5 pair of shoes or a $5 hat.

We will give tickets to the first 200 people, over 16 years old, to enter the store Friday. There will be two tickets entitling the holders, free of charge, to choice of a Silk Shirt or a Silk Waist. This will be done each day during the sale, only the presents will be different each day.

The sale will continue from day to day until the money is raised. We will refund your railroad fare up to twenty miles both ways if you buy a bill of $25.00. So you will save railroad fare, get your spring outfit for one-half the regular price, and have a chance at three big presents each day and see the big balloons go up. Can you beat it? But we advise you to come early and get the pick, as we are expecting a RECORD CROWD. Everything marked in plain figures. A big force of clerks to wait on you. H. Miller's stand, Central City, Ky.

CENTRAL CITY, KENTUCKY

HARDING REJECTS LEAGUE IN MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

Favors Knox Resolutions To Restore Peace; Then an As- sociation of Nations

Washington, April 13.—President Harding, in his first address to Congress, would approve a "declaratory resolution" by Congress, "with qualifications essential to protect all our rights," which would end the "technical state of war against the central powers of Europe."

The President added, however, that "it would be idle to declare for separate treaties of peace with the central powers on the assumption alone that these would be adequate because the situation is so involved that our peace engagements cannot ignore the old world relationships and the settlements already effected nor is it desirable to do so in preserving our own rights and contracting our future relationships."

Although declaring unreservedly against "the existing League of Nations," the President said: "The wise course would seem to be the acceptance of the confirmation of our rights and interests as already provided, and to engage under the existing treaty, assuming, of course, that this can be satisfactorily accomplished by such explicit reservations and modifications as will secure our absolute freedom from inadvisable commitments and safeguard all our essential interests."

An association of nations, the President said, could not be founded until the world was at peace.

"Peace Without Delay"
"The anomalous condition ought not to be permitted to continue. To establish the state of technical peace without delay, I should approve a declaratory resolution by Congress to that effect, with the qualifications essential to protect all our rights. Such action would be the simplest keeping of faith with ourselves and could in no sense be construed as a desertion of those with whom we shared our sacrifices in war, for these powers are already at peace."

"Such a resolution should undertake to do no more than thus to declare the state of peace which all America craves. It must add no difficulty in effecting, with just reparations, the restoration for which all Europe yearns and upon which the world's recovery must be founded. Neither former enemy nor ally can mistake America's opinion because our attitude as to responsibility for the war and the necessity of just reparations already has had formal and very earnest expression."

"It would be unwise to undertake to make such a statement of future policy with respect to European affairs in such a declaration of a state of peace. In correcting the failure of the executive in negotiating the most important treaty in the history of the nation, to recognize the constituted powers of the Senate we would go to the other extreme, equally objectionable, if Congress or the Senate should assume the function of the executive. Our highest duty is the preservation of the constituted powers of each and the promotion of the spirit of co-operation so essential to our common welfare."

"It would be idle to declare for separate treaties of peace with the central powers on the assumption that these alone would be adequate because the situation is so involved that our peace engagements cannot ignore the old world relationship and the settlements already effected, nor is it desirable to do so in preserving our own rights and contracting our future relationships."

"The Wiser Course"
"The wiser course would seem to be the acceptance of the confirmation of our rights and interests as already provided, and to engage under the existing treaty, assuming, of course, that this can be satisfactorily accomplished by such explicit reservations and modifications as will secure our absolute freedom from inadvisable commitments and safeguard all our essential interests."

"Neither Congress nor the people needs my assurance that a request to negotiate needed treaties of peace would be as superfluous and unnecessary as it is technically ineffective and I know in my own heart there is none who would wish to embarrass the executive in the performance of his duty when we all are so eager to turn disappointment and delay into gratifying accomplishment."

"The weariness at home and the disappointment to the world have been compensated in the proof that this republic will surrender none of the heritage of nationality, but our rights in international relationship have to be asserted; they require establishments in compacts of amity; our part in readjustment and restoration cannot be ignored, and must be defined.

"With the super-governing league definitely rejected and with the world so informed, and with the status of peace proclaimed at home, we may proceed to negotiate the covenanted relationships so essential to the recognition of the rights everywhere of our own nation and play our full part in joining the peoples of the world in the pursuits of peace once more. Our obligations in effecting European tranquility, because of war's involvements, are not less impelling than our part in the war itself. This restoration must be wrought before the human procession can go onward again. We can be helpful because we are moved by no hatreds and harbor no fears. Helpfulness does not mean entanglement, and participation in economic adjustments does not mean sponsorship for treaty commitments which do not concern us and in which we have no part."

To Invite Senator's Advice

"In an all impelling wish to do the most and best for our own republic and maintain its high place among nations, and at the same time make the fullest offering of justice to them, I shall invite in the most practical way the advice of the Senate, after acquainting it with all the conditions to be met and obligations to be discharged, along with our rights to be safeguarded. Prudence in making the program and confident co-operation in making it effective cannot lead us far astray. We can render no effective service to humanity until we prove anew our own capacity for co-operation in the co-ordination of powers contemplated in the constitution and no covenants which ignore our associations in the war can be made for the future."

"More, no helpful society of nations can be founded on justice and committed to peace until the covenants re-establishing peace are sealed by the nations which were at war. To such accomplishment—to the complete re-establishment of peace and its contracted relationship, to the realization of our aspirations, for nations, associated for world helpfulness without world government, we shall address ourselves, fully mindful of the high privilege and paramount duty of the United States in this critical period of the world."

The President reserved his discussion of foreign relations for the concluding portion of his address.

He took up first the restriction of national expenditures to the limits of national income which he said must be considered in connection with measurably lifting the burdens of war taxation. By striking resolutely at expenditure, he said, a solution would be hastened and he warned Congress that to continue a course of unlimited expenditure would mean "inevitable disaster." Economy in government, he said, would find its reflex in economy and thrift among the people themselves.

Not For Burden Shifting

Discussing readjustment of taxation President Harding said that the country did not expect and would not approve a shifting of tax burdens, but was more interested in "wiping out the necessity for imposing them." The government, he said, was committed to the repeal of the excess profits tax and to abolish the "inequities and unjustifiable exasperations" in the present tax system.

Discussing tariff revision the President reaffirmed his belief in the protection of American industry.

"It is our purpose," said he, "to prosper America first. The privileges of the American market to the cheaply today, and the effect of foreign producer are offered too much of our own productivity is the destruction of our self reliance which is the foundation of the independence and good fortune of our peoples. Imports should pay their fair share of our cost of government. Agriculture, the President said, was menaced with prices at pre-war normals and being further endangered by high cost of transportation from farm to market through the influx of foreign farm products."

Views On Tariff Revision

While he urged emergency tariff revision immediately, he spoke of permanent revision later, and said:

"The maturer revision of our tariff laws should be based on the policy of protection, resisting selfishness which turns to greed, but ever concerned with that probability at home which is the source of all abiding good fortune."

Deflation, the President told Congress, might well receive its attention, because while reduced costs in basic production had been recorded, deflation had failed to reach the mark where it could be "proclaimed to the great mass of consumers." Congress, he said, might help speed price readjustments by "suitable inquiry."

Discussing the railroad question President Harding said there would be "an avowed foundation on which to rebuild" if it could be understood that "Congress has no sanction for government ownership," and does not levy taxes upon the people to cover deficits in a service which should be self-sustaining. "Railway rates and costs of operation, he said, must be reduced, because freight rates had mounted until 'commerce is halted and production discouraged.'"

Development of good roads and inland waterways, the President said, were collateral subjects with the transportation question and besides endorsing Federal aid to highways he urged Congress to formulate a consistent program.

Discussing the merchant marine the President declared for "a great"

one and told Congress that if present laws gave advantages to competitors of American merchant marine "the spirit of American fair play will assert itself to give American carriers their equality of opportunity." He added he would report to Congress if intelligent and efficient administration under existing laws made established service impossible.

Wireless Development

The President devoted a portion of his address to wireless and cable development, declaring for prohibition of private monopolies tending to prevent development of needed facilities. Especially desirable, he said, were ample services "at reasonable rates for the transmission of press matter," so that "the daily press of all countries well may be put in position to contribute to international understandings by the publication of interesting foreign news."

Dealing with aviation, the President declared for its encouragement for military and civil purposes, recommended the establishment of a bureau of aeronautics in the Navy department and continuation of the Army air service as "co-ordinate combatant of the army," to be used in co-operation with other agencies to establish national transcontinental airways.

In recommending an efficient co-ordination of the various agencies having to do with the welfare and assistance of soldiers and sailors, the President made no mention of the bonus question. He recommended the creation of a department of public welfare, making it plain that there was no purpose by the Federal government "to invade fields which the States have occupied."

In commending speedy consideration of the army and navy appropriation bills, the President declared that, while the government was in accord with the wish to eliminate the burden of the heavy armament and was ready to co-operate with other governments to approximate disarmament, it would not "entirely discard our agencies for defense until there is removed the need to defend." He made no specific declaration as to the size of the army or the navy except to say that the naval program could "carry no threat after the latest proof of our national unselfishness."

The remaining portions of the President's address were devoted to the discussion of foreign affairs.

Sectional view of one of the areas at Camp Zachary Taylor showing character of buildings to be sold.

This Army Camp comprises 2,000 acres of valuable land, adjoining the city of Louisville, together with 2,000 buildings of various sizes, and a vast amount of equipment, such as boilers, plumbers' supplies, stoves, hot water heaters, radiators, electrical equipment, motors, heating and refrigerating plants, etc.

THE BUILDING PROBLEM

For years building has been at a practical standstill. The high cost of material, especially lumber, and the scarcity of labor have compelled a stoppage in the erection of homes, storehouses, barns, etc. That time has now passed. Workmen have been released by the hundreds of thousands and Camp Zachary Taylor will release lumber and equipment. 68,000,000 feet of yellow pine will be disposed of at this sale and at such prices as bidders see fit to pay. Come to this greatest of bargain sales and buy what you want at your own figures. Join with your neighbors in making up car lots to save freight rates. A vast number of cedar, white oak, chestnut and creosoted fence posts, water troughs and grain bins will interest every farmer. There are miles of woven wire hog-tight fencing. Two grain elevators, completely equipped with motors, conveyors and chutes.

OUR GUARANTEE

This is an absolute sale. You win or you lose on April 25th. We sell no one privately, but do an exclusive auction business. No set price, no reservation, no by-bidding, no private sale. This has been our motto for the twelve years we have been in business, during which time we have operated from the Great Lakes to the Gulf, and have never failed or refused to sell a single piece of land, or property of any kind, after it was placed under the hammer. Unable to Gain Strength After Operation

Fredericksburg, Va.—"After I had gone through a very serious operation I could not regain my health and strength. I suffered with pains and aches all over and was also very nervous. My mother advised my taking Dr. Pierce's medicine. I took the 'Favorite Prescription' and the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' alternately, and they soon built me up and seemed to give me new life. I heartily recommend these medicines to women who suffer with any sort of weakness."—MRS. W. S. COX, 908 Hanover St. All druggists.

Home Town Helps

BEAUTY COMES WITH GROWTH

American Towns, If They Are Well Planned, Will Develop Along Proper Artistic Lines.

We see American towns in the process of growth, and the slow transition from hastily erected "shacks," a one-story general store, a blacksmith shop (these are still needed), a garage nowadays, a church and a schoolhouse, into a flourishing community not always attractive. There is a period when there are no shade trees, when streets are dusty or muddy and unpaved, where there is an unfinished appearance about everything. It is not so many years since a large number of the towns and villages of Indiana had an unkempt, untrimmed look. Seen from trains in passing, they looked uninviting. As a matter of fact, the residents had other things to think of than beauty. They were building their homes, making their living by arduous labor, sending their children to school and sacrificing many desirable things for the sake of the necessities. This is the history of all towns.

The conditions are different now. Indiana is full of beautiful towns and small cities that were the "gopher prairies" of years ago. Beautiful homes, handsome lawns, paved and shaded streets, substantial business houses, attractive public buildings, including libraries, and a general air of prosperity distinguish them. The same people live there who were there at the beginning. When they and their children came to the point where beauty and luxury could be added to the necessities of living, they reached out and provided them. It is the way with American towns.—Indianapolis Star.

ASSIST IN BUILDING HOMES

Associations Through the Country Teach Thrift and at the Same Time Make Good Citizens.

Pointing out that a man who owns his own home probably will be a good citizen, C. Clinton James, president of the Building Associations' council for the District of Columbia, issued a statement showing what building associations in the district are doing to encourage home owning and thrift.

While complete figures are not available, it is estimated that the total assets of building associations in Washington will be more than $28,000,000, he announced.

"The building associations throughout the country are teaching thrift and trying to educate the public to own their own homes," Mr. James stated. "The motto of the United States League of Local Building and Loan Associations is 'The American Home—the Safeguard of American Liberties.'"

"The building associations have assisted very largely in solving the housing question by assisting persons of limited means to finance the buying of their home, but the demand for loans has been much greater than the funds available," it is asserted.

While building associations are not as necessary in smaller towns as in the cities, the same idea expressed in community spirit will work out to the desired result in the end.

Give a Hand.

In every community there are successful men—men of experience, men of means. In every community there are young men who might make a success of life. They have it in them; all they lack is some one to give a hand. It may not be money they need, perhaps only an interested friend. Somebody helps whenever a young man gets started right in anything. Somewhere every successful man got a start by some one's help. To keep the world moving on an upward slope the process must be made perpetual. Each man, once started, should become a starter of others. And who starts another gets himself along at a more rapid gait. There is that in helping another that reflects no credit alone to the agent, but a bent of mind, an outlook on life, a generosity of soul, that wins a way forward for himself also.—Thrift Magazine.

Set Out Hedge Plants.

There are few homes that could not be made more attractive by a frame setting of hedge plants, not necessarily a tall-growing hedge that would inclose the grounds, but a low-growing one to mark the boundary of the home grounds and add a certain amount of privacy.

Trees Benefit Community.

Nothing that costs so little adds so much to the appearance of a community as do tree-lined streets. Comfort and beauty alike are served, and there is cash in a shady walk wherever homes are for sale.

Begin to Recognize Truth.

Far-seeing business men have come to realize that it is the country that makes the cities and not the cities that make the country.

Plant Shrubs Now.

Now is a good time to plan for some flowers and shrubs around the house. They are worth the little extra care they make.

"HALF AND HALF"

JURY DISAGREES

Owensboro, Ky., Apr. 7.—There was another mistrial in the prosecution against Penn Taylor, negro, accused of assaulting and robbing Jesse Coomes, street car motorman, several months ago. There were six women and six men on the jury and after considering the case 45 minutes this morning they reported there was no chance to agree on a verdict.

Judge Slack told them they had not had time to consider the case very seriously and sent them back to the jury room. Shortly before the noon hour they filed into the courtroom with the announcement that there was no chance to agree. It is understood that they stood 10 to 2 for conviction. The two for acquittal were: Mrs. Gamble Stuart and Mrs. John Gilmore, it was learned. On a former trial of the case, the jury stood six and six.

There were no other cases set for trial today, and Judge Slack dismissed the jury until Friday morning.

REPEAL OF PROFIT TAX

REGARDED AS CERTAIN

Washington, April 11.—Suggestions as to the means of raising the $4,000,000,000 of revenue necessary for the conduct of the national government during the next fiscal year will be sent to Congress early next week, Secretary Mellon said. Discussion of sources which may be tapped by the new tax programme will be concluded probably by the treasury secretary and his staff of advisers.

Thus far, it was stated, definite decision has been reached on only one question, repeal of the excess profits tax. Mr. Mellon has not decided what form of levy will supplant it.

The whisky is to be stored in the warehouse of the Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Company. Extra gaugers are at work gauging the whisky, but the company is not required to tax-pay the whisky until it is sold.

THE HONEYMOON

By MARGARET A. SWEENEY.

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"I'll not pay it—you're profiteering!" Philip Crosby was angry. "I'll get out, you can have your house. You think—"

The door slammed and Crosby stood looking through the glass at his landlord's disappearing back.

It was the Crosbys' wedding anniversary, and every year, for 15 years, Philip Crosby had celebrated the event by closing his office and taking Mrs. Crosby on a one-day "honeymoon."

This time with his landlord was annoying. It would upset Helen, he reflected, as he turned from the door and climbed the stairs to his wife's room.

"That was Haskins for the rent," he told her, "and he said that it would be $10 more after this month."

Mrs. Crosby, standing before her mirror, adjusting her new fall hat, was silent.

Philip Crosby's attention seemed suddenly attracted to the rug at his feet. He had caught the meaning of his wife's silence. He remembered how often—how very often—she had pleaded with him to buy a house—a real home, Philip, a roof we can call our own. Her words had come back to him now, "a few hundred or a thousand down, Philip, and the rest as rent, and we—we can get along without a car, but we must have our own roof."

And he remembered, too, that after the arrival of the new car Helen never spoke to him again about buying a house. The subject had become taboo.

"I am ready, Philip," Crosby was brought back from his reminiscent mood by the touch of his wife's hand upon his shoulder.

"I was just wishing, Helen, that—that I had taken your advice and—not put so much money into that car—I—I don't blame you to—to be sore about it and—"

"Well, we won't talk about it today, Philip," Mrs. Crosby had begun to do something to her husband's tie. "We'll go along on our 'honeymoon' and forget our troubles."

Philip Crosby's face brightened, and he stooped and kissed the patient little woman who had so loyally shared his ups and downs—mostly downs, for Philip Crosby was not the kind of a man that amasses money.

"Where are you going to take me, Philip?" Helen Crosby asked as they went downstairs.

"Anywhere you say, Helen; the car is all ready. I had just finished cleaning it when old Skinfitt Haskins came along—we—we must find a house that has a garage—I—"

"I do wish that motorcars were built big enough to—to keep house in—it would solve the housing problem for many families," Mrs. Crosby remarked from the open doorway as she surveyed the graceful lines of the big gray car, "and—just think—some of them cost as much as a comfortable house—and their upkeep is—"

"Well, we won't talk about it today, Helen," Philip Crosby chuckled as his wife stepped into the car, "we'll go along on our 'honeymoon' and forget our troubles."

Helen Crosby laughed—they laughed easily, these two, who were all and all to each other. Her husband took his place beside her and the big car swung out into the clear September sunshine.

"Have you seen the new bungalows on Grove Hill, Philip?" Helen persisted; "there are eleven—perfectly charming six-room affairs and no two alike. I wish you would take me up there before we go home."

"I'll take you up now, but no doubt they are all rented—the location is good."

The white and green bungalows on Grove Hill were good to look upon, standing wide apart among towering trees, with screened verandas, sun parlors, garages and garden plots—they looked good to Philip Crosby.

"That one with the chimney on the outside is, to me, the most 'homey' looking," Mrs. Crosby pointed to a bungalow standing back from the street where the car had stopped; "let us get out and look at it."

They walked up the neat asphalt path and tried the door. It was locked. "Try the side door, Philip; maybe some of the carpenters are out around the garage."

When Philip Crosby had disappeared around the corner of the house Helen began to fumble in her beaded bag. She fished out the key and let herself into the house, leaving the door open behind her.

When the astonished Philip walked in a few minutes later his wife was standing in the hall, nervously dangling the key.

"How in—what the—" Crosby groped for words. Helen Crosby handed the key to him and her firm little hands went up and gripped his shoulders and her frank eyes looked into his.

J. Leslie Hagerman, of the Herald force, returned home Saturday after having completed a six weeks course in the Mergenthaler Linotype School at Chicago. While there he obtained a fair knowledge of the mechanism of the various models and will now be able with practice to develop full speed as a linotypist.

"The History of the Steel Plow"

Dates back to John Deere. He gave the world the steel plow and now he has given the FORDSON and SAMPSON Tractors, steel plows they can pull satisfactory, "THE JOHN DEERE LIGHT 40." This plow only weighs about 550 pounds, the beams are guaranteed against bending or breaking, but the main feature is the SELF ADJUSTING HITCH. The hitch being connected to the depth lever automatically rises or lowers to the proper line of draft whenever the depth of the plow is changed with the lever. No vertical hitch adjustment is necessary. AUTOMATICALLY the plow maintains the proper line of draft, and the bottoms continue to run true and level when the depth is varied. We have this plow on our sample floor and we ask you to investigate it if you are contemplating purchasing a plow. Better take a look at the John Deere all steel disc harrow. They follow the Fordson or Sampson "quietly" so that they will not get fretted and quit.
